RE: Western Washington University (WWU) Marine, Coastal, and Watershed Sciences Degree Program

Dear Representative Lytton:

The City of Anacortes supports our local businesses with growing demands for technically skilled employees. We strongly support the creation of the Marine, Coastal, and Watershed Sciences Degree Program at WWU. As a city in Washington State, we are keenly aware of the need for STEM graduates to mix technical expertise with communications skills. We are particularly interested in the unique terrestrial and marine emphasis of this focus, land-sea emphasis of this program, and in its plan to train students in computational and analytical as well as conceptual and critical thinking. Skagit County economic development will overlap with the topics WWU leaders envision: coastal science and policy, sustainable energy, marine technology, the maritime sector, climate solutions, sustainable aquaculture, agriculture, water rights solutions, and many others.

- Washington demand for STEM jobs is growing at a strong rate, 7% higher than the national average. 94% of these jobs will require postsecondary education, and 44% will require at least a baccalaureate professional degree
- Nationwide jobs in the sector of coastal science and policy are expected to double to over 330,000 within the next decade. This will be particularly relevant here in the Pacific Northwest, where the economy is closely associated with the health of Puget Sound, watersheds, and the coast.
- The basic infrastructure - lab facilities, instrumentation, professional technical support, etc. - is already in place at Western, and will require only minor enhancements to support implementation of this innovative new program
- Western's programs in Energy Sciences and Energy Policy provide leveraging opportunities for future innovation, and faculty with nationally recognized oceanographic and environmental expertise will prepare students for developing professional relationships within the state and beyond.

This program would be unique in introducing students to scientific and policy issues on both ocean and land. The timing is right for developing such an innovative and vibrant new degree program.

Sincerely yours,

CITY OF ANACORTES

WESTERN
WASHINGTON UNIVERSITY

WWU by the numbers

15,574 students
95 percent undergrads
88 percent residents of Washington
25 percent students of color
33 percent first generation students
82 percent freshman retention rate
99 percent of classes taught by faculty, not graduate assistants
71.5 percent graduation rate

WESTERN WASHINGTON UNIVERSITY

2017 Legislative Priorities

As a publicly purposed university, Western's mission is to serve the people of the state of Washington. Western, along with Washington's other colleges and universities, strongly supports "Washington Competes," a proposal to maintain the state's competitive edge by bolstering degree production, student success and educational quality.

Support the Success of All Western Students ($5.8 million)

Western requests funding to strengthen core support programs that help ensure student success and provide an equitable, inclusive learning environment.

Student Success and Achievement ($3.4 million)

Significant increases in student demand have limited Western's ability to offer key support services such as academic advising, tutoring, mental health services and support for students with disabilities. Specifically, Western will invest in:

- Proactive Advising, Tutoring and Peer Mentoring
- Mental Health Support
- Support Services for Students with Disabilities
- Destination Graduation: College Completion for Returning Adults
- Targeted Support for Entry-Level Math Courses

Enhancing Equity, Inclusion and Diversity ($2.4 million)

Western also requests funding to increase support staff for the Multicultural and Ethnic Student Center and to increase the number of student peer mentors for underrepresented students, following WWU's successful Compass 2 Campus program.

Reduce Bottlenecks in STEM Degree Programs ($2.7 million)

Western requests $2.7 million per biennium to address bottlenecks in STEM degree programs. This plan will increase capacity in entry-level courses in Math, Physics and Chemistry that are required for STEM majors, and accommodate an additional 100 STEM students per year. This investment will reduce time to degree by an average of two academic quarters—saving students and families thousands in tuition costs.

Address the State's Teacher Shortage ($6.4 million)

Western requests $6.4 million per biennium to address the state's teacher shortage by preparing an additional 225 teachers each year in the areas of greatest of need: STEM Secondary Education, Special Education, Early Childhood Education and Elementary Education. These new enrollments would be distributed across Western's existing locations in Bellingham, Everett and Seattle. Western's proposal also includes a retention plan for beginning teachers in the region, as well as a "second-chance" option to reintroduce and support teachers who are returning to the profession.

Marine, Coastal and Watershed Sciences Degree Program ($2.9 million and $1.2 million in one-time costs)

Western requests funding to establish a new interdisciplinary STEM degree program designed to meet student and employer demand and help address Washington's emerging challenges associated with climate change, resource management, and the growing fields of coastal science and policy. The focus of the Marine, Coastal, and Watershed Sciences program would be unique in its coastal sea-and-land emphasis, which requires a multidisciplinary approach to solving problems arising in coastal and estuary pollution, such as erosion, flooding, sustainable fisheries and aquaculture, ocean acidification, sustainable energy, and changing hydrologic cycles. The new degree program would leverage Western's existing areas of expertise in oceanographic, aquatic, and environmental sciences, and expand student access to Western's existing Shannon Point Marine Center in Anacortes.

Marine, Coastal and Watershed Sciences Degree

$2.9 million and $1.2 million in one-time costs

Western requests funding to establish a hands-on, interdisciplinary STEM degree program designed to meet student and employer demand and help address Washington's emerging challenges associated with climate change, resource management, and the growing fields of coastal science and policy.

The focus of the Marine, Coastal, and Watershed Sciences Program would be distinctive in its coastal "sea-and-land" emphasis and its multidisciplinary approach to solving problems on our coasts and in our estuaries, such as pollution, erosion, flooding, sustainable fisheries and aquaculture, ocean acidification, sustainable energy, and changing hydrologic cycles.

The new degree program would leverage Western's areas of expertise in oceanographic, aquatic, and environmental sciences, and expand student access to Western's Shannon Point Marine Center in Anacortes.

Coastal sustainability jobs are projected to nearly double by 2022, from about 170,000 to 330,000, with the vast majority of job openings expected to be located in coastal states.

The new program would produce at least 40 graduates per year—and STEM faculty would teach hundreds of students per year—with an emphasis on computing and data analysis, predictive modeling and spatial analysis, as well as training in policy and economics.

OTHER BUSINESS

Resolution 1980: Legislative Priorities

Administrative Services Director Emily Schuh presented a revised Resolution 1980 adopting legislative priorities for the 2017 state legislative session. She reviewed the revisions which reflected input received from councilmembers at the January 3, 2017 meeting.

Mr. Miller argued for removing the explicit reference to Governor Inslee in the first bulleted priority. After some discussion, councilmembers generally concurred with that suggestion. Ms. Schuh agreed to reword as follows:

- "A shared revenue budget that fully funds … "

Mr. Miller said he did not support increasing the property tax cap above 1% and provided extensive rationale for his position. He said he could support the legislative priority if it included a line stating that the city budget would not increase by more than CPI or some specific measure of inflation. Mr. Archibald agreed with Mr. Miller. Councilmembers discussed the failure of a 1% property tax increase to keep pace with inflation and with the city's actual costs, different ideas for tying property tax increases to known metrics, and the appropriate venues for determining appropriate public expenditures.

Ms. Pickett moved, seconded by Mr. Walters, to approve Resolution 1980 adopting the city's 2017 legislative priorities, removing the explicit mention of "Governor Inslee" in the first legislative priority bullet.

Mr. Lovelett moved, seconded by Mr. Adams, to amend the motion to add a line to the priorities supporting "Augmenting services and facilities for early childhood education and child care." The motion to amend passed unanimously by voice vote.

Vote on amended motion: Ayes – Walters, Pickett, Adams, Lovelett, Archibald and Johnson. Nays – Miller. Motion carried.

There being no further business, at approximately 6:25 p.m. the Anacortes City Council meeting of January 17, 2017 was adjourned.

The following claims against the City of Anacortes have been preaudited and certified by the Clerk-Treasurer as ready for City Council approval at the January 23, 2017 City Council meeting:
